Here Is A Letter Of Interest Way From North Dakota

The News-Bulletin has received the following interesting letter from O. W. Bettenhausen, proprietor of The Sunnyside Livestock Farm at Wishek, North Dakota and as Mr. Bettenhausen has many relatives in this section we thought the letter would be of special interest:

I wish to let you know we still receive the Bulletin and enjoy very much to note the different items. It always seems like a short visit of some old friend.

The 1926 crop is very spotted. Here in our locality we have a fair crop, although it is below the average. West is practically no crop and there are people here most every day trying to buy straw and feed so as to be able to winter the stock.

We are still threshing. It will take about 10 days or two weeks to complete the work. Have had very much rain this month. It gave the farmers a good chance to do their fall plowing of which you see hundreds of acres turned over.

Corn is the average crop and those who have silos have them filled up in good shape. Had our first frost Sept. 23rd—froze ice three quarters of an inch thick in the creeks which are all full of water.

Potatoes are good and all the garden truck has been very good.

Enclosed find check to pay for subscription to the News-Bulletin.

Now wishing you success and prosperity, I remain,

Mr. LeRoy Hutchinson of 96th and 52nd Ave, Oak Lawn, was fatally injured when his car was struck by another car at 86th and Justine St., on September 9th.

Mr. Hutchinson was on his way to work when the accident happened. He was thrown from his car, fracturing his skull which rendered him unconscious, from which he never recovered, passing away the next day at 12:45 P.M. at the Auburn Park hospital.

He was employed as chauffeur

To Divide Dammann Estate

After some small bequests have been paid to her grandchildren, the remainder of Mrs. Minnie Dammann's estate is to be divided equally among her three sons and one daughter, according to her will filed for probate.

Mrs. Dammann died at her home in Frankfort, Sept. 20. Her sons are, Albert, Louis and Henry Dammann, and one daughter, Mrs. Sadie Widup. Hearing on the will is set for October 26.

WILL COUNTY POLITICAL POT STARTING TO BOIL

With the November election drawing nigh, politics in Will County are getting hot. The first sign of activity in this section was seen Thursday when a Republican rally was held at the St. Mary Hall, Mokena. All the candidates were on hand to get acquainted with the voters. The Sheridan Family of entertainers gave a fine program and were much enjoyed. On Friday night of this week a similar rally will be held at the Frankfort hall at Frankfort. Everyone is invited.

The Democratic forces are not asleep either. The big fight in Will County centers on the sheriff's office. The Margraff forces are said to be very busy in Frankfort and have quite a strong following in Frankfort.

Some Reasons Why Our Children Are Attending School

By Prof. Clarence Uhl
Principal of Mokena Public Schools

After thinking over the remarks of last week's article I imagine you feel like saying, "Why are the children in school anyway?" I cannot answer this for you but I can give you a brief summary of what has been and is being done toward solving the problem in some places. These data may guide you to some extent in your thinking.

In 1918 the following ultimate objectives or Cardinal Principles of Education were formulated by the Commission on the Reorganization of Secondary Education:

- I. Health.
- II. Command of the Fundamental Processes.
- III. Worthy Home Membership.
- IV. Vocation.
- V. Citizenship.
- VI. Worthy Use of Leisure.
- VII. Ethical Character.

In 1924 a Committee of the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools gave us a slightly different set of Objectives. The Ultimate Aims of Education as the Committee saw it are stated in terms of the Disposition and the Ability:

- I. To Maintain Health and Physical Fitness.
- II. To Use Leisure Time in Right Ways.
- III. To Engage Successfully in Vocational Activities.
- IV. To Sustain Successfully Certain Definite Relationships, such as Domestic, Community, Civic and the like.

Each one of these Ultimate Objectives is made up of hundreds of Immediate Objectives. For example, let us consider Citizenship. It is made up of several hundred skills, understandings, attitudes, and ideals. Last Spring Professor Nietz, now at the University of Pittsburgh, wrote his doctor's thesis on the topic, "What Do Leaders of Thought Say A Good Citizen Should Do." He learned by having personal interviews with these Leaders of Thought that there are approximately eleven hundred duties which a good citizen ordinarily performs, and maybe he did not find them all. In like manner, however, the other main objectives are being or will soon be analyzed. We should prepare a list of the things we think a Worthy Home Member should do, the things of which the Worthy Use of Leisure should consist, the items necessarily involved in maintaining Health, etc. Such objectives are miles away from Formal Discipline, neither will we have to base all of our hopes on the Transfer of Training (see article in last week's paper on, Why Do Your Children Attend School?). When we get these new objectives determined in detail we will drive directly toward the goal in our teaching, using material which actually stimulates and motivates the ideals and interests that we wish to form in the lives of our boys and girls. Our children will not blindly be doing so many problems or translating so many lines of foreign language while the teacher tremulously looks on hoping that the by-product will finally be Education. Professor W. W. Charters, now at the University of Chicago, has recently published an excellent book, "The Teaching of Ideals, in which he has attempted to analyze Ethical Character. I am using his character objectives in making a study of the first four books of Caesar's Gallic War (second year High School Latin) to see what stimuli they contain for building and motivating these desired character traits. Fellow students are analyzing other curricular materials to see just which objectives can be stimulated and motivated by the present school curriculum. The result will likely involve the elimination of much that we now teach and the addition of much that is directly useful.

When we have the multitude of objectives decided upon we will probably say to the teacher, "I am hiring you to assist me in teaching the children these understandings, these ideals, these skills, and these attitudes." We will no longer hire a teacher to teach a certain School Subject but to teach our Children. We will not have to wait for the Grade Cards in order to see what progress our children are making; we will see the products of learning as desirable changes actually wrought out in the developing personality of each of our children.

According to many estimates, the surface water run-off is fifty per cent greater on bare ground than on a forested slope.

According to surveys made recently, there are about two million acres of land in Illinois that would be more valuable planted to forests than for any other purpose. If this area were covered with leaf mulch and shrubs, as well as timber, it would undoubtedly have a great effect on reducing floods.

This reforestation work of the Department of Conservation is of great importance to sportsmen as well as farmers. According to William J. Stratton, Director of the Department, the areas that will be bought will be used for game preserves and refuges. When the amount of forest land owned by the state is great enough, it will undoubtedly be opened to sportsmen for hunting and fishing and to the general public for camping and similar purposes.

Why Will Co. Needs Forest Preserve

The voters of Will County will be called on to decide a very important question at the November election when they will decide on if Will County is to have a Forest Preserve. Many voters favor such a preserve to conserve the fast vanishing forests of the county. The following article as given out by the Department of Conservation of the State of Illinois is very timely and shows the need of forest preserves:

Disasterous floods in Illinois are to some extent due to destruction of forests in the opinion of R. B. Miller, Chief Forester of the Department of Conservation.

Both the cutting of timber and the destruction of the leaf mulch and shrubs by forest fires play a most important part in causing floods. This is particularly true in roughly rolling and hilly country.

Farmers Open War On Hunters

Farmers in Frankfort township are opening war on hunters. The trouble is that foreigners come out on Sundays and shoot almost anything alive on the farms. This has aroused the ire of the farmers and they have determined to put a stop to hunting on their farms.

Under a new kink in the law on hunting and trespassing, hunters are immune from arrest and fine if the farmer fails to comply with certain parts of the law. Some one railroaded a joker thru at the last legislative session whereby the new law requires a farmer to have signs up on his farm forbidding hunting, trapping and trespassing or else said farmer must run a notice in the local paper to the same effect, otherwise the hunters cannot be arrested or fined.

C. M. Cleveland residing on the Mokena road and Lincoln Highway saw some hunters on his farm last Sunday and found they were well posted on the new law. As a result the farmers opposed to hunting, trapping or trespassing on their farms have caused to be published the notice appearing on this page relative to hunting, etc. Before going on a farmers' land ask first for permission and be on the safe side.

LAY GAS MAINS AT MATTESON

Exhibition By Former Palos Artist

Claude Buck is giving exhibition this week at 220 N. Michigan Av

DISPROVES OLD FALLACY

It is a common belief that people who are artistically talented cannot achieve success in matrimony, but Estrid and Claude Buck have proven this can be done. While Estrid gives and has given their five year old twins, (Bobby and Jewel) the utmost care and attention, not for one moment has she neglected to keep her voice in cultivation, training and practice. Her last recital at Kimball Hall was a notable success and was universally acclaimed by the critics. She is now using her beautiful Mezzo-Contralto voice as soloist in the Sixteenth Christian Science church. Claude too, has had a hand in the bringing up of the twins who have inherited lustrous voices from their mother. Claude says they both try to reach high C especially when he has to be torn away from some poetic mood to care for them while Estrid fills some important engagement. I remember dropping in one fine morning when they lived at Palos Park, Illinois and finding Claude with a bowl of oatmeal balanced one on each knee, and a spoon in each hand feeding the twins simultaneously, and studying a picture nearby, doing his juggling act perfectly, showing rare skill in finding the hungry mouths, without taking his glance from the picture he was so deeply absorbed in studying.

Until recently they have resided in Palos Park in a quaint old fashioned hut in the woods where Claude has as his studio an old chicken coop. Love of the woods got into Claude's makeup while he was a boy, though he was born among the tenements of the Bronx. He says, "From the woods I get a sense of contact with the permanent and eternal that I can find nowhere else." This is truly exemplified in one of his many varieties of paintings called the "Spring Dance" which was inspired and sketched while the cherry blossoms were blooming. The whole represents lightness of spirit and rhythmic gaiety. On the other hand, showing the extreme temperamental qualities of this young artist, he has done the "Storm Cloud", a symbolical human creature in form but terrific in its intensity.

Dr. Wagram, one of Germany's prominent art critics says of him, "There is no artist today to compare with Mr. Buck. Some artists have achieved great success but have adhered to only one line of expression. For one who has handled with such consummate skill and with such penetrating imagination so many subjects and moods the field is limitless. One subject shows just as much the true spirit of the man as another, time, presenting an unusually versatile character."

The "Renaissance Painter" is his conception of a painter of that time. As we look closely we see the resemblance to the artist himself and we wonder, could the spirit of him actually have been lurking around at that period to some day present the world with such a personage as Mr. Buck? In him is the atmosphere of the old historical, together with high sense of appreciation of the new and modern. Combining these he presents a happy medium.

At times he is moody and shows hints of a highly emotional spiritual nature such as when he painted "Christ Crucified" and "Christ Healing the Blind". "Christ Crucified" shows intense physical anguish, the depth of which this moody individual is capable of feeling. Coming immediately out of his reverie and looking up with a bright smile Claude said, "When I painted, 'Christ Healing the Blind', it was done in my old chicken coop." The place was hardly large enough for lofty thoughts, but the dark dreary atmosphere abounding there inspired me to paint that picture". Then his sense of humor came to the front and smilingly he put forth a painting which he calls, "The Humor of a Good Story." He says, "this picture denotes the usual occurrence in the average drawing room," so we come to the conclusion that he is an ordinary human being after all. He also quoted "The Best Stories are usually the Worst," and immediately put that picture away and fell into another mood.

"The Volga Boatman," he said, "reminds me of Russian types with whom I have been intimately familiar, and the care and tenderness which registered bespoke untold volumes of his associates and environment when he was a struggling art student in New York. 'The Volga Boatman' is one of his strongest and does him great justice.

The figures are not painted, they are sculpted out and pounded into life.

"Two Labor Subjects" in his collection offer a great contrast to his surroundings at present, but he has actually experienced this life in his early boyhood when he was an art student by day and one of these struggling laborers by night. While vacationing in the Indiana Sand dunes recently, he reflected that conditions were now so contrary to his life then, prompted these pictures, one day time and one night time, lunch hour.

"The Old Fiddler" is a living character and true to life. This, Mr. Buck, also painted in his chicken coop studio. The subject is Mr. E. B. Pyre, father of Walton Pyre, the well known actor who also resides in Palos Park, Ill. Mr. Pyre posed daily for Mr. Buck, playing his fiddle, calling out each dance piece and part thereof by name. He was one of the first men to cross the Rockies in search for gold in 1848. This subject lends a real human interest and one can fairly hear the tunes flowing from his old fashioned fiddle.

The artistic world is taking great interest in Mr. Buck's exhibit which opened on October 4th and which includes the subjects mentioned above as well as a large number of other recent paintings indicating the great scope of this painter's talent.

Honor Bride-To-Be

A very pretty kitchen shower was tendered Miss Ruth Neithammer in honor of her approaching marriage, by the former Moke Camp Fire Girls, at the home of Mrs. Ralph Bush in Joliet, last Saturday afternoon, October 2nd.

The home was prettily decorated in the bride's chosen colors, old rose and white.

Various guessing games were played, the prizes awarded being presented to the honored guest.

A pretty decorated wagon, drawn by little Ralph Bush, which was filled with gifts, was presented to Miss Neithammer, as also a book made by some of "the girls" depicting the life of the bride-to-be, from birth to old age, by magazine pictures. This is a custom these Camp Fire Girls have, of doing for each of the bride members. It always causes much merriment.

A three course luncheon was served later at a table decorated in the prevailing colors and having a camp fire for a center piece, the guests being seated by hand painted place cards, showing the much loved fire. The painting being the work of Mrs. Bush.

The following were present: Mrs. Gilbert Hurley, Mrs. Harvey Spiess, Mrs. Frank Vaky, Mrs. Howard Ayres, Mrs. Ralph Bush, Mrs. Wm. Semmler, Mrs. Ed. Werner, Mrs. B. Hostert, Mrs. Wm. Lowe and Mrs. I. D. Marti.

Other functions have been recently given for this popular young lady. She was tendered a dinner party last Friday evening in Chicago and presented with silver ware by the young ladies who were employed in the same office.

Last Saturday being the last day Miss Neithammer worked, her employers presented her with a beautiful davenport mirror.

On Thursday evening her aunt, Mrs. Otto Neithammer in her home in Chicago, gave a dinner in her honor. Relatives made up the guest list.

Miss Neithammer leaves Mokena Friday evening, taking the bus from Chicago to St. Louis, Saturday morning. Her marriage will take place in that city next Tuesday. Her many friends in Mokena wish her much joy in her new home.

A Word With the Old Folks

Elderly People Are Learning Importance of Good Elimination.

IN the later years of life there is apt to be a slowing up of the bodily functions. Good elimination, however, is just as essential to the old as to the young. Many old folks have learned the value of Doan's Pills when a stimulant diuretic to the kidneys is required. Scanty or burning passages of kidney secretions are often signs of improper kidney function. In most every community are scores of users and endorsers who acclaim the merit of Doan's. Saint as Castaway on Postage Stamp

Philatelists will be interested in the announcement that the Maltese authorities have chosen St. Paul, for the design of their new 18-penny stamp. The saint is shown as a castaway on the island. Saints have been popular subjects with stamp designers of the Mediterranean states.

England's own patron, St. George, was used by Crete 20 years ago, and in 1919 another Maltese issue showed St. Paul escaping shipwreck. Only recently Italian stamps were issued portraying the death of St. Francis of Assisi, of which the seven hundredth anniversary occurs soon, following the example of Portugal, in commemorating the sept-centenary in 1895, of the birth of St. Anthony of Padua.

A religious design, Madonna with child, was adopted by the Hungarian post office four years ago.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Title Float in Harvest Pageant Parade at Omaha

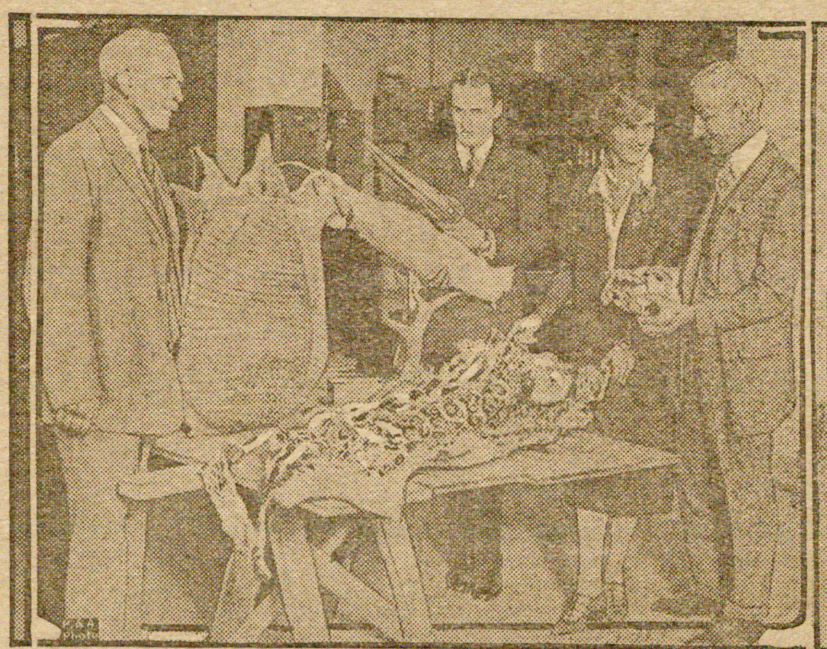

The grain-growing states of the Central West, the bread-basket of the nation, for the thirty-second successive year celebrated the close of the harvest season with an elaborate fall festival pageant at Omaha under the auspices of Ak-Sar-Ben. The big events were the electric parade on Wednesday night, September 29, and the great costume ball on Friday evening, October 1. That pictured above is the title float of the harvest pageant parade. Other floats pictured in elaborate detail the agricultural resources of the central western states. The pageant is the occasion of one of the big annual gatherings of the states of which Omaha is a central point.

Girl Heroine Honored in Naming of This New Bridge

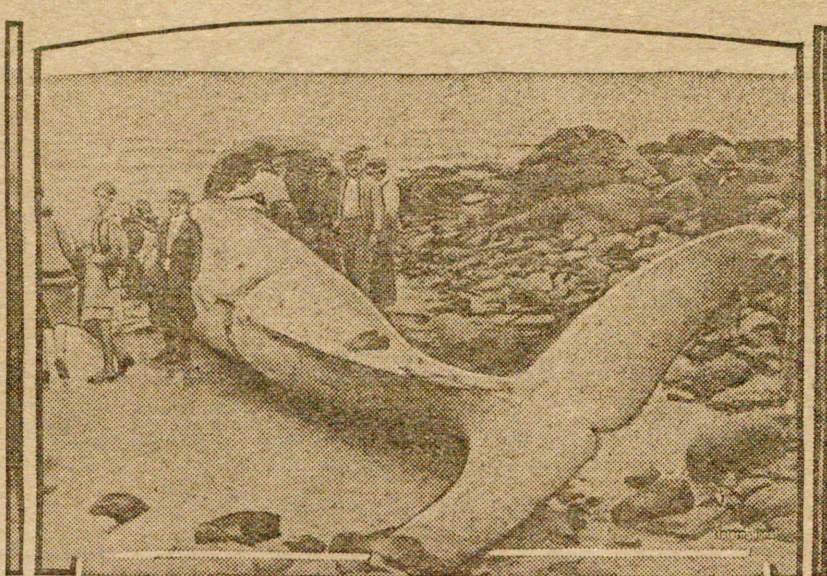

The Chicago & Northwestern railroad has just completed and dedicated this new steel bridge over the Des Moines river, between Boone and Ogden, Iowa. It has been christened the "Kate Shelley" bridge in memory of the heroine who, in 1881, then a girl of fifteen, risked her life by crossing the old long trestle structure to warn an approaching train that the bridge was about to go down. A violent storm was raging. Her daring deed gave her national fame and a rich reward. She died in 1912.

Showing Her Trophies From Jungle

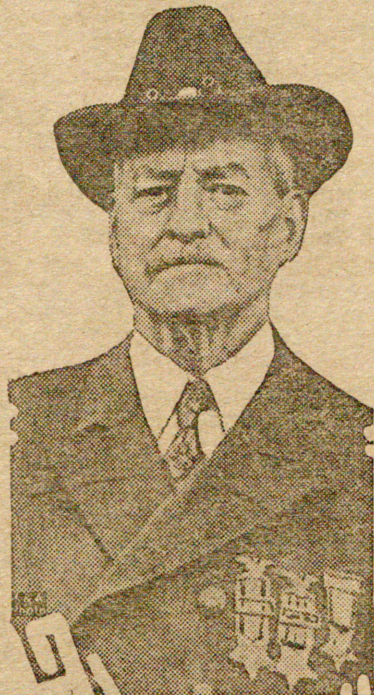

Laden with approximately 2,000 trophies and specimens of Brazilian jungle life, Mrs. Marshall Field III returned to Chicago and declared that her three months in South America with the Field museum explorers equalled for thrills and fascination anything she had found in civilized life. Mrs. Field is the only American woman known to have shot a jaguar. She is seen above exhibiting some of her trophies.

Hampton Beach Gets a Big Whale

The residents of Hampton Beach, N. H., were greatly excited the other day when a forty-foot whale was found marooned on the rocks of Great Bear's Head. Lesson for October 10

THE REPORT OF THE SPIES

LESSON TEXT—Numbers 13:17-14:45. GOLDEN TEXT—We are well able to overcome it.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Two Brave Spies. JUNIOR TOPIC—Two Against Ten. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Brave and the Cowardly Scouts.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Courage of Faith.

I. The Spies Sent Out (13:17-20). Less than two years have passed since the Israelites were delivered from Egyptian bondage. They are now at Kadesh-Barnea within sight of the promised land. Moses urged them to go in and take immediate possession (Deut. 1:21).

The record in Deuteronomy 1:19-25 shows that God did not take the initiative in sending out the spies, but that the people because of lack of faith made the request. There was a threefold purpose in sending out the spies.

1. To see whether the land was as God had told them (v.18).

2. To see whether the people who dwell there were strong or weak, few or many (v.18).

3. And to see whether the cities were made up of strongholds or of tents (v.19).

II. The Commission Executed (13:21-25).

They entered the land from the south and traversed it to its northern limits. On their return from the north they gathered some specimens of the fruit of the land.

III. The Spies Rendered a Report (13:26-33).

1. The majority report (vv. 26-29). (1) The land floweth with milk and honey (v. 27).

As a proof of it they displayed the fruit.

(2) The people who live there are strong (v. 28).

(3) The people lived in walled cities (v. 28).

(4) The land is inhabited by giants (v. 28, cf. 33).

In comparison with the inhabitants of the land they saw themselves as grasshoppers. Furthermore, they saw the people so distributed—the Amalekites in the south country, the Hittites, Jebusites and Amorites in the north—that it was impossible to conquer them.

2. The minority report (vv. 30-33).

In part this report agreed with the first. It did not ignore the difficulties, nor dispute the facts, but it did deny the conclusion of the majority. They did not minimize the task before them, but asserted with God's help that they were well able to get possession of the land, and urged immediate action.

IV. The Rebellion of the People (14:1-45).

This rebellion began by crying (vv. 1-3). They lifted up their voices and cried, and the people wept that night. They even wished that they had died in the wilderness or in Egypt. God took them back to wander in the wilderness for thirty-eight years.

2. Proposition to return to Egypt. (vv. 4-10).

Their crying was followed by a proposal to organize for the return to Egypt. They proposed to select a captain as their leader. Joshua and Caleb protested against this, which so exasperated the people that they were about to stone them. At this point God interposed in their behalf.

3. God's wrath upon the people (vv. 11-12).

Because of their unbelief He proposed to smite them with pestilence and to disinherit them, supplanting them with a nation mightier than they.

4. Moses' intercession in behalf of the people (vv. 13-19).

Moses plead with God against this judgment because, the Egyptians would hear of it and blaspheme and this they would pass on to the other nations, saying that God was not able to bring them into the land.

5. The Lord's response to Moses' plea (v. 20-30).

He assured Moses that He had granted pardon according to his intercession, but told him that although He would bring them into the land according to His promise, yet with the exception of Joshua and Caleb the men of that generation should be debarred.

6. The presumption of the people (vv. 40-45).

Having in unbelief refused to go up at the command of Moses, now in presumption they go. Moses advised them against such presumption, saying, "the Lord will not be with you."

LUNCHEON SUGGESTIONS

For a nourishing salad, the following will be liked by those who favor bologna sausage:

Holland Salad.—Mix half a pound of bologna cut into very thin slices with one pint of cold boiled potatoes, also sliced very thin, one medium-sized onion shaved thin, and six sardines freed from skin and bones, then cut into bits.

Add two hard-cooked eggs, sliced. Pour over three parts of oil to one of vinegar, a teaspoonful of horseradish and one of tomato catsup. Serve on lettuce.

Breslau Beef.—Put lean beefsteak through a meat chopper, season with minced onion, pepper and salt, and add one large soda cracker rolled fine. Shape an inch thick in a greased baking pan and bake; cover with slices of bacon after it has baked a few minutes. Serve when the bacon is crisp and brown.

Chicken Girdle Cakes.—Beat one egg, add two tablespoonfuls of melted chicken fat, a cupful of minced chicken, half a teaspoonful of salt, a pint of milk and flour enough to make a cake batter; add three teaspoonfuls of baking powder and beat well.

Pear Pie.—Line a baked pastry shell with quartered pears, add a bit of lemon juice and a sprinkling of the grated rind; cover with whipped cream and serve chilled.

Waldorf Oysters.—Put three tablespoonfuls of olive oil in a saucepan with a small onion sliced, one shredded green pepper, fry slowly until well cooked. Add a pint of oysters or more, season with salt, butter, red pepper, and a few tablespoonfuls of currant jelly. Cook five minutes, then add a tablespoonful of tomato catsup. Boil up and serve hot.

Coconut Drop Cakes.—Soften one-half cupful of butter (do not melt it), add a cupful of light brown sugar, a cupful of sour milk, a teaspoonful each of cinnamon, cloves and soda, two cupfuls of flour; beat well, then add one-half cupful of coconut. Drop by small spoonfuls on buttered sheets and bake in a moderate oven. Add more flour if the cakes do not keep their shape.

What to Eat.
For a change from the regular broiled steaks, try

Baked Steak.—Rub fine one canned pimento, add a pound of minced beef, one-half pound of minced veal, a fourth of a pound of minced ham, and season with salt. Form into a loaf and lay in greased paper, folding it well together; set on a pan in a hot oven and bake 30 minutes.

When done remove the paper, slip the loaf from the paper on to a hot platter and dot with bits of butter.

Crecy Soup.—Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter in a frying pan, add two tablespoonfuls of flour, and when well mixed add a pint of milk and cook until smooth and slightly thick. Season with salt and pepper and add a cupful of cooked carrots which have been put through a sieve. Boil up and serve at once.

Dainty Croquettes.—Mix a cupful of boiled and chopped calves' liver with half-cupful of minced bacon cooked brown. Form into balls, dip into egg, roll in crumbs and fry in hot fat until brown.

Minced Chicken With Green Peppers.—Cover a green pepper with boiling water and cook ten minutes, drain, remove the seeds and cut into narrow strips two inches long. Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter and add one and one-half tablespoonfuls of flour; stir until blended, then pour on two-thirds of a cupful of chicken broth. Bring to the boiling point, add a cupful of diced chicken and the peppers, again boil, and serve on pieces of toasted bread.

Strawberry Trifle.—Cut strawberries into halves and mix with granulated sugar, let stand an hour. Arrange lady fingers log-cabin fashion, fill with the sugared berries and cover with sweetened whipped cream.

Chicken Souffle.—With a cupful more or less of cold chicken cut into bits one may have a most delicious luncheon dish. Prepare a white sauce using half chicken stock and half cream, one cupful, three tablespoonfuls of chicken fat or butter, three of flour, cook until well blended, then add the liquid and cook until thick; stir in the chicken and add two or three well-beaten egg yolks and fold in the stiffly beaten whites. Add cooked mushrooms, cooked green pepper, onion juice, salt and cayenne to taste. Bake until puffy and well-set and serve hot, as it is apt to fall very quickly.

Summer squash cooked in as little water as possible and drained, then mashed, is most appetizing served with plenty of butter and seasoning.

It is better to eat more often and lightly than to take a heavy meal at any time. Exercise in the open air and sunshine is as essential at seventy as it is at seven.

COATS WITH HATS TO MATCH; TIERED AND PLAITED SKIRTS

Pretty Outfit for a Schoolgirl.

FOR the children there is a treat in store, namely, chinchilla coats with hats to match. Of course the mothers are going to voice their approval of this fashion, for of all cloakings none is more dependable and good looking, than is chinchilla.

The new chinchilla coats are amusingly mannish in cut and detail, until it comes to the lining, which is as joyously gay as youth could possibly wish it.

What prettier or more practical for the schoolgirl than a matching chinchilla coat and hat like the one in the picture? This particular model happens to be lined with the new suede-finished woolen fabric, but bright flannel is just as suitable. One is making a fashionable selection in either navy, or French blue lined with vivid red, or cinnamon, jungle green, channel red or garnet with a chosen contrasting lining.

There isn't much trimming needed on the hat, possibly a suede strapband and buckle or a wee cocarde of not an "ea." Looks as if French styl-ists are tiering skirts more enthusiastically than ever, and with an ingenuity which baffles description. In fact everything that will possibly admit of the tiering process in the fashioning of the new autumn and winter costumes is being tiered, even to sleeves, as this picture so interestingly portrays.

For swagger style the much better tiered frock as shown to the left has no compeer. It presents the ultra-smart idea for the coming season. Mark the clever circular treatment of the tiers which elaborate the skirt and take note of the fact that the sleeves are also tiered below the elbow. Both velvet and satin dresses are being interpreted in this tiered manner.

In fact, the velvet-tiered frock is a favorite theme among dress designers. Sometimes the tiers are placed far and row, overlapping in conventional line which simulates an appearance of wide tucks. Again, and this is a grosgrain ribbon. It, too, boasts a cheerful lining self-colored to that of the coat, but preferably of satin.

Some of the handsome chinchilla coats are enriched with nutria collars. The same is true of the plaid woolen coats for girls—they are mostly fur-collared. Likewise they have hats of same material, for the ensemble of coat and hat is being greatly emphasized in junior apparel.

Another charming outfit for the young girl for "dress up" occasions is the plaid plaited skirt either taffeta or woolen, with which is worn a velvet coat topped with a soft beret to match. Some of these short coats are double breasted, others are styled with novelty belts of gold or silver kid or gay suede which is artfully detailed with metal decorations.

Children's suede-cloth coats acquire skirt fullness with godets or plaits, also below-the-elbow fullness is gathered into tiny fur wristbands, matching the collar.

Tiers are popular in Paris, at least in fashion's realm where they spell it with an "ie" and

Science Points Way to Cheaper Pork

Robt. J. Evans, secretary of the American Duroc Jersey Association and a strong exponent of the ton-litter idea.

Prof. J. R. Wiley, of Purdue University, "father of the ton-litter idea."

F. H. Norman, of Roanoke, Indiana, who produced the first ton-litter on record.

stock shows in America, the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation hoped to demonstrate just what business-like methods in growing hogs for the market would do for the farmer," says Samuel R. Guard, director of the Foundation. "When these 'Ton Litter' contests were first started the idea was to produce 2,000 pounds of pork in six months from a litter of ten. That meant an average of 200 pounds a pig in six months. Some farmers believed this was too much, but many of them, by breeding prolific, rapidly maturing stock of good size, succeeded in producing litters weighing over a ton. The world's champion litter went well over the two-ton mark in six months, instead of a single ton. This should convince the average farmer that a production of 'Ton Litters' is not such a difficult matter after all. We fully expect to see the 4,789-pound record eclipsed this year."

GEO. W. DAVIES

Secretary of the American Poland-China Record Association, Explaining How Farmers May Add One Hundred Million Dollars to Their Annual Income by Following the Ton-Litter Idea.

IF THE American farmer will apply in his pig raising certain practical principles made available to him by science and experience he can boost his income $100,000,000 a year from this one source alone.

Next month will witness the return of the ton-litter reports. Farmers who want to learn how to make more money out of their "mortgage-litters," will study these master lessons of economic pork production with greatest care, according to the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation, which exhibited the champion two-ton litter last year.

In effect the "Ton-Litter" means a material reduction in the overhead carried by the farmer on his pigs by getting more pigs to market from each of his sows. More pigs from less sows and few simple rules of sanitation in their raising, mark all the difference to the farmer making this $100,000,000 or doing without it.

Just what the "Ton Litter" can do for the farmer was demonstrated in dramatic fashion at the American Royal Livestock Show at Kansas City and the International Livestock Exposition at Chicago last fall. The thousands of men and women who thronged both of these shows were amazed to learn that the 16 pigs comprising the world's champion litter of pigs exhibited by the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation weighed 4,789 pounds at six months of age. Over two tons of pork from one sow in 180 days!

Largely as a result of the Foundation's pig exhibit, and brought closer home by a depressed corn market, the "Ton Litter" is rapidly winning many converts among farmers who had previously scoffed at it. They are coming around to see that through proper feeding, breeding, care, and management they can turn out at six months a litter of pigs weighing 2,000 pounds that had previously taken them twelve to eighteen months to produce.

Business Methods Used.

"In exhibiting the world's champion litter of pigs at the two largest live-

That was in 1922. Many of the leading hog growers looked upon the development of one-ton litters in six months' time under average farm conditions as nothing more than an idle dream and politely refused to take part in the contest. Mr. Wiley and his associates, however, scoured around the state until they had found a sufficient number of farmers who were willing to follow the few simple yet rigid rules laid down for the contest. The work began. Long before the pigs were six months old the excellent results of the work became evident. Thirty-six ton litters were marketed in Indiana that year as a result of that contest. And the "Doubting Thomases" had to admit that the raising of litters weighing a ton in 180 days under average everyday farm conditions was not only possible, but could be accomplished without much difficulty.

After the first season's work, the swine extension men in other states were so completely sold on the ton-litter idea that the organization of ton litters was immediately made a major project in practically every section of the country. From these thirty-six litters in the one ton class in 1922, interest in the work has continued to grow until last year 741 ton litters were reported in 23 states. Following are the states where ton litter contests flourished last year, and the number of ton litters credited to each:

Illinois	122	Texas	16
Pennsylvania	121	Iowa	8
Indiana	85	Georgia	6
Minnesota	70	Oregon	5
Tennessee	67	Virginia	4
Kentucky	44	Louisiana	4
Ohio	41	North Dakota	3
Missouri	35	Kansas	2
Wisconsin	34	Nebraska	2
Iowa	27	Utah	2
Oklahoma	21	North Carolina	1
Michigan	18	Total	741

Two Tons of Pork on Hoof.

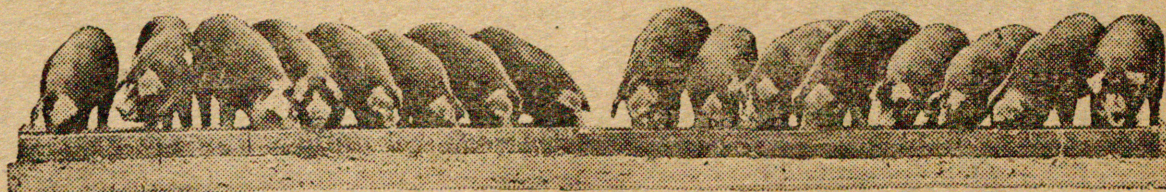

The astounding thing about the 1925 "Ton Litter" contest in the various states is the phenomenal weight to which some of these litters have been brought up. Over seventeen tons of hogs from eight sows on seven farms in six states were produced in one year. These eight sows, with one in Texas in 1924, are the dams of the only known litters in the world to reach a weight of two tons or more at 180 days of age. They demonstrate absolutely that not only can one ton of pork on the hoof be made in six months, but that double that amount is possible if the best methods of breeding, feeding and management are followed.

The champion litter of the year and of all time was produced by the Rawleigh Farms at Freeport, Ill. This remarkable group of 16 purebred Poland-China pigs reached the world's record weight of 4,789 pounds in six months after passing the one-ton mark when 102 days old. These pigs were rescued by the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation from 25,000 others on the Chicago market when they were within five minutes of the "sticker's" knife in the packing plant. They were then used to make up one of the feature educational exhibits at last year's American Royal and the International Livestock Shows. Another litter on the same farm, consisting of 15 pigs, weighed 4,511 pounds in 180 days, the second highest weight on record.

Strict adherence to modern sanitation practices was followed in the development of these two litters. Blue grass before weaning and rape afterwards, with plenty of fresh, clean water were furnished. Corn, tankage, minerals, skim milk and kitchen waste with a pig meal consisting of bran, corn meal, linseed meal, rolled oats, middlings, beef scrap, gluten feed, dried buttermilk, molasses, salt and charcoal made up the concentrate allowance. The cost of feed, labor, freight and commission left a profit of approximately 7 cents a pound for the heaviest litter.

Five Pigs to the Litter.

Mr. Wiley's survey also showed that the average litter contained but five and seven-tenths pigs and that the average weight of those litters at six months of age was low—1,030 pounds for those made up of from five to seven pigs. This convinced Mr. Wiley that the key to increased hog profit lay in the prolificacy in sows and the ability to grow rapidly in pigs.

The biggest two-ton litter ever produced—16 pigs out of a single sow—weighing 4,789 pounds in 180 days. The champion litter was shown at the live stock exhibitions in Kansas City and Chicago last fall by its owner, the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation.

"The Vagabond King" a Real Hit

Seldom if ever in Chicago has such an impression been made upon the theatre-going public and lovers of music, as Russel Janney's sweeping triumph "The Vagabond King," founded on Justine Huntley McCarthy's beautiful romance, "If I Were King," now playing the Great Northern Theatre.

Dennis King, who may be remembered for his Mercutio in Jane Cowl's "Romeo and Juliet," has made a romantic hit in the part of Francois Villon. His acting is not only brilliant but is of the dynamic quality which fits well with the sardonic humor of the poet-thief who was really a great patriot. This young man has not only unusual ability as an actor, but is a real baritone with that richness and emotional quality in his voice which arrests the attention of the ear.

Rudolph Friml has written one of the most delightful scores of his career and W. H. Post and Brian Hooker have contributed a worthy book and lyrics. James Reynolds has designed such scenes and costumes that the stage pictures produced are like glorious paintings come to vivid life.

"The Song of the Vagabonds" as sung by Villon and the tavern rabble is so stirring and throbbing with patriotism that the audience is almost pulled to its feet in the contagious thrill and excitement of the moment. Other popular songs are "Only a Rose," sung by Berna Deane and Dennis King; "Love For Sale," sung by Frances Halliday; "The Drinking Song" sung by Arthur Deagon.

There are 150 people in the cast, ensemble and orchestra. The following excerpts show what the Chicago dramatic editors think of this gorgeous musical play:

Fred Donaghey, Tribune—"The Great Northern is again a good place to go—as a spectacle the show is rich and satisfying—Yes, last night's crowd was cheering when the curtain fell on Part III."

Ashton Stevens, Herald-Examiner—"There are with us for many months a good cast, an immense chorus that can act, a big and beautiful production of a beautiful romance and an undeniable Dennis King."

C. J. Bulliet, Post—"Applause swept the Great Northern last night in gusts and gales after every climax, reaching to cyclonic proportions after the 'Song of the Vagabonds.'"

Claudia Cassidy, Journal of Commerce—"A thrilling show worthy of the romantic swagger lavished upon it."

Amy Leslie, News—"Dennis King a revelation. No other actor could sing the role so brilliantly; no other singer could approach King's exquisite acting of the part."

The Optimist, American—"Chicago gave 'The Vagabond King' a royal welcome. The inspired singing and acting of Dennis King as Francois Villon made him a stage hero for the season."

Virginia Dale, Journal—"It is extravagantly fine entertainment, stirring and stunning; the chorus is likely to set the town talking."

Orpheum, Offers Big Bill This Fall

Great States Theatres, Inc., is now presenting the Earle Ross Players, a large company of dramatic artists, at the Orpheum Theatre in Joliet for the entire season, the first matinee was held Sunday, Sept. 26th.

Their first play, "The Best People," a comedy of American life today, is one which ran more than a year in New York and ten months in Chicago, where it was offered at the Cohan's Grand Theatre last season.

This play, it is explained, is typical of the kind which the stock company will offer during the year. Other bills will include such productions as "Lightnin'," which starred Frank Bacon at the Blackstone Theatre, Chicago, breaking all records for that city, and which ran four solid years in New York. "Smilin' Through," Jane Cowl's big success which ran a year at the Chicago Princess; David Warfield's immortal play, "The Auctioneer," also his "Music Master"; "The Alarm Clock," the big Avry Hopwood New York success; "Ladies Night," "The Bat," "The Cat and the Canary" are similar attractions.

The company, composed only of men and women who have long records of big successes, is a most able one, according to announcements from "Great States". Mr. Ross, actor-manager, has established himself as a premier actor and director in stock organizations in such cities as Cleveland, Detroit, San Francisco and Cincinnati.

A scenic artist from Chicago has been engaged, and it is announced that nothing will be eliminated to make these productions high-class not only as far as the company itself is concerned, but in manner of production, in settings and stage equipment.

The company will give a performance every night with matinees on Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday, the matinee on Saturday being a Bargain Matinee. All main floor seats for every performance will be reserved. Night and Sunday matinee prices for main floor and boxes are 75c and balcony seats, none of which will be reserved, at 50c. At the Wednesday and Saturday matinees, the main floor and boxes are 50c and the balcony, not reserved, 35c. At the Bargain Matinee on Saturday, all children will be admitted to any seat in the house for 25c.

It is explained that all the productions will be clean, wholesome, and the kind the entire family will enjoy.

It is possible to select favorite seats and make reservations for the entire season.

ST. MICHAEL'S CHURCH NOTES

Rev. Wm. Gorey, Pastor. High Mass was celebrated Sunday at St. Michael's at 10 o'clock and will continue to be solemnized

WILL COUNTY CATTLE FEAT-URES CHICAGO MARKET.

Wm. Seltzer of Manhattan made an outstanding sale of steers and heifers mixed at the Chicago market, September 30th, when a shipment of his own feeding realized $12.35 per hundredweight, which price is but five cents per cwt., under the years extreme top figure for any kind of cattle.

The shipment numbered fifty head and averaged 770 lbs., being so exceptionally even in size and finish the entire lot sold just as they were sent to the market, which is an unusual thing. The cattle were Colorado Hereford $28.00 a head. The sale was made with 8,000 cattle reported on the market the same day.

Most Difficult Things in Life.

A Danish paper recently asked readers to state what is the hardest thing in the world to do. It received many more replies than it had anticipated, some of which are as follows: To be a toe dancer if you weigh 200 pounds, to get back borrowed books, to trim one's nails while wearing boxing gloves. Some of the readers took the question seriously and answered it seriously. One replied that to live without telling a lie was the most difficult of all.

Protection for Shoes

The copper-toed shoes of sixty years ago were invented by a Maine farmer who found they lasted longer than three ordinary pairs.

His Accidental End

There are all sorts of ways of putting things, and some sound much better than others. For example, there is the case of the man of whom Lord Coleridge used to tell, whose father was hanged for highway robbery. Some one asked him how his father died. "Sir," said he "he fell from a scaffolding outside Newgate while he was talking to a clergyman."—Youth's Companion.

Pierrot, deep in his own somber thoughts, scarcely heard the strange laugh that came suddenly from her lips. Nepeese was listening to the growl that was again in Baree's throat. It was a low but terrible sound. When half a mile from the cabin, she unstung the panniers from his shoulders and carried them herself. Ten minutes later they saw a man advancing to meet them.

It was not McTaggart. Pierrot recognized him, and with an audible breath of relief waved his hand. It was DeBar, who trapped in the Barren Country north of Lac Bain. Pierrot knew him well. They had exchanged fox-poll. They were friends and there was pleasure in the grip of their hands. DeBar stared then at Nepeese.

"Tonnerre, she has grown into a woman!" he cried, and like a woman Nepeese looked at him straight, with the color deepening in her cheeks as he bowed low with a courtesy that dated back a couple of centuries beyond the trap-line.

DeBar lost no time in explaining his mission, and before they reached the cabin Pierrot and Nepeese knew why he had come. M'sieu, the Factor at Lac Bain, was leaving on a journey in five days, and he had sent DeBar as a special messenger to request Pierrot to come up to assist the clerk and the half-breed storekeeper in his absence. Pierrot made no comment at first. But he was thinking. Why had Bush McTaggart sent for him? Why had he not chosen some one nearer? Not until a fire was crackling in the sheet-iron stove in the cabin, and Nepeese was busily engaged getting supper, did he voice these questions to the fox-hunter.

DeBar shrugged his shoulders. "He asked me, at first, if I could stay. But I have a wife with a bad lung. It was caught by frost last winter, and I dare not leave her long alone. He has great faith in you. Besides, you know all the trappers on the Company's books at Lac Bain. So he sent for you, and begs you not to worry about your fur-lines, as he will pay you double what you would catch in the time you are at the Post."

"And—Nepeese?" said Pierrot. "M'sieu expects me to bring her?"

From the stove the Willow bent her head to listen, and her heart leaped free again at DeBar's answer.

"He said nothing about that. But surely—it will be a great change for M'sieu's sake."

Pierrot nodded. "Possibly, Netootam."

They discussed the matter no more that night. But for hours Pierrot was still, thinking, and a hundred times he asked himself the same question: Why had McTaggart sent for him? It must be, he told himself finally, that M'sieu had sent for him because he wanted to win over the father of Nepeese and gain the friendship of Nepeese herself. For this was undoubtedly a very great honor that the Factor was conferring on him. And yet, deep down in his heart, he was filled with suspicion.

When DeBar was about to leave the next morning, Pierrot said:

"Tell M'sieu that I will leave for Lac Bain the day after tomorrow."

After DeBar had gone, he said to Nepeese:

"And you shall remain here, my cherie. I will not take you to Lac Bain. I have had a dream that M'sieu will not go on a journey, but that he has died, and that he will be sick when I arrive at the post. And yet, if it should happen that you care to go—"

Nepeese straightened suddenly, like a reed that has been caught by the wind.

"Non!" she cried, so fiercely that Pierrot laughed, and rubbed his hands.

So it happened that on the second day after the fox-hunter's visit Pierrot left for Lac Bain, with Nepeese in the door waving him good-by until he was out of sight.

On the morning of this same day Bush McTaggart rose from his bed while it was still dark. The time had come. He had hesitated at murder—at the killing of Pierrot; and in his hesitation he had found a better way. There could be no escape for Nepeese.

It was a wonderful scheme, so easy of accomplishment, so inevitable in its outcome. And all the time Pierrot would think he was away to the East on a mission!

He ate his breakfast before dawn, and was on the trail before it was yet light. There was a vast amount of brutal satisfaction to McTaggart in anticipating what was about to happen, and he reveled in it to the full. There was no chance for disappointment. He was positive that Nepeese would not accompany her father to Lac Bain. She would be at the cabin on the Gray Loon—alone.

This aloneness was to Nepeese burdened with no thought of danger. There were times, now, when the thought of being alone was pleasant to her, when she wanted to dream by herself, when she visioned things into the mysteries of which she would not admit even Pierrot. She was growing into womanhood—just the sweet, closed bud of womanhood as yet—still a girl with the soft velvet of girlhood in her eyes, yet with the mystery of woman stirring gently in her soul, as if the Great Hand were hesitating between awakening her and letting her sleep a little longer. At these times, when the opportunity came to steal hours by herself, she would put on the red dress and do up her wonderful hair as she saw it in the pictures of the magazines Pierrot had sent up twice a year from Nelson House.

On the second day of Pierrot's absence Nepeese dressed herself like this, but today she let her hair cascade in a shining glory about her, and about her forehead bound a circlet of red ribbon. She was not yet done. Today she had marvelous designs. On the wall close to her mirror she had tacked a large page from a woman's magazine, and on this page was a lovely vision of curls. Fifteen hundred miles north of the sunny California studio in which the picture had been taken, Nepeese, with pouted red lips and puckered forehead, was fighting to master the mystery of the other girl's curls!

She was looking into her mirror, her face flushed and her eyes aglow in the excitement of the struggle to fashion one of the coveted ringlets from a tress that fell away below her hips, when the door opened behind her, and Bush McTaggart walked in.

"Tell M'sieu That I Will Leave, the Day After Tomorrow."

Chapter XI

The Willow's back was toward the door when the Factor from Lac Bain entered the cabin, and for a few startled seconds she did not turn. Her first thought was of Pierrot—for some reason he had returned. But even as this thought came to her, she heard in Baree's throat a snarl that brought her suddenly to her feet, facing the door.

McTaggart was standing with his back against the door; and at Nepeese—in her wonderful dress and flowing hair—he was staring as if stunned for a space at what he saw. Fate, or accident, was playing against the Willow now. If there had been a spark of slumbering chivalry, of mercy, even, in Bush McTaggart's soul, it was extinguished by what he saw. Never had Nepeese looked more beautiful, not even on that day when MacDonald the map-maker had taken her picture. The sun, flooding through the window, lighted up her marvelous hair; her flushed face was framed in its lustrous darkness like a tinted cameo. He had dreamed, but he had pictured nothing like this woman who stood before him now, her eyes widening with fear and the flush leaving her face even as he looked at her.

It was not a long interval in which their eyes met in that terrible silence—terrible to the girl. Words were unnecessary. At last she understood—understood what her peril had been that day at the edge of the chasm and in the forest, when fearlessly she had played with the menace that was confronting her now.

A breath that was like a sob broke from her lips.

"M'sieu!" she tried to say. But it was only a gasp—an effort. She seemed choking.

Plainly she heard the click of the iron bolt as it locked the door. McTaggart advanced a step.

Only a single step McTaggart advanced. On the floor Baree had remained like a carved thing. He had not moved. He had not made a sound but that one warning snarl—until McTaggart took the step. And then, like a flash, he was up and in front of Nepeese, every hair of his body on end; and at the fury in his growl McTaggart lunged back against the barred door. A word from Nepeese in that moment, and it would have been over. But an instant was lost—an instant before her cry came. In that moment man's hand and brain worked swifter than brute understanding; and as Baree launched himself at the Factor's throat, there came a flash and a deafening explosion almost in the Willow's eyes.

It was a chance shot, a shot from the hip with McTaggart's automatic. Baree fell short. He struck the floor with a thud and rolled against the log wall. There was not a kick or a quiver left in his body. McTaggart laughed nervously as he shoved his pistol back in its holster. He knew that only a brain shot could have done that.

With her back against the further wall, Nepeese was waiting. McTaggart could hear her panting breath. He advanced halfway to her.

"Nepeese, I have come to make you my wife," he said.

She did not answer. He could see that her breath was choking her. She raised a hand to her throat. He took two more steps, and stopped. He had never seen such eyes.

"I have come to make you my wife, Nepeese. Tomorrow you will go on to Nelson House with me, and then back to Lac Bain—forever." He added the last words as an afterthought. "Forever," he repeated.

He did not mince words. His courage and his determination rose as he saw her body droop a little against the wall. She was powerless. There was no escape. Pierrot was gone. Baree was dead.

He had thought that no living creature could move as swiftly as the Willow when his arms reached out for her. She made no sound as she darted under one of his outstretched arms. He made a lunge, a brutal grab, and his fingers caught a bit of hair. He heard the snap of it as she tore herself free and flew to the door. She had thrown back the bolt when he caught her and his arms closed about her. He dragged her back, and now she cried out—cried out in her despair for Pierrot, for Baree, for some miracle of God that might save her.

And Nepeese fought. She twisted in his arms until she was facing him. She could no longer see. She was smothered in her hair. It covered her face and breast and body, suffocating her, entangling her hands and arms—and still she fought. In the struggle McTaggart stumbled over the body of Baree, and they went down. Nepeese was up fully five seconds ahead of the man. She could have reached the door. But again it was her hair. She paused to fling back the thick masses of it so that she could see, and McTaggart was at the door ahead of her.

He did not lock it again, but stood facing her. His face was scratched and bleeding. He was no longer a man but a devil. Nepeese was broken, panting—a low sobbing came with her breath. She bent down, and picked up a piece of firewood. McTaggart could see that her strength was almost gone.

She clutched the stick as he approached her again. But McTaggart had lost all thought of fear or caution. He sprang upon her like an animal. The stick of firewood fell. And again fate played against the girl. In her terror and hopelessness she had caught up the first stick her hand had touched—a light one. With her last strength she struck at McTaggart with it, and as it fell on his head, he staggered back. But it did not make him loose his hold.

Dan Beard Organized American Boy Scouts

The experiences of Lieut. Gen. Sir Robert S. S. Baden Powell of the British army with boys as messengers during the Boer war in South Africa so impressed him that he came later to devote almost his entire time to work with boys. He organized the boy scouts in England, and from there the movement spread to most other countries, and the membership has grown until it now includes millions of boys.

"The boys' general," however, freely acknowledged his debt to movements of a similar character in the United States. And so, although the Boy Scouts of America were not incorporated until 1910, which was some little time after the British organization had been formed, the scouts in this country really date to a boys' organization founded by Daniel Carter Beard—Dan Beard—about 1905. This body became, with another founded by Ernest Thompson Seton, the foundation of the American scouts.

"Packing Industry"

From the beginning pork was salted down and packed in barrels, hence arose the name now given the meat industry. It is more or less a misnomer today because it applies in a greater degree to the industries of fruit and vegetable canning where packing in containers is an important feature.

1908 ORCHARD AVENUE, MUSCATINE, IOWA

The Woolworth Building in New York City, which towers 792 feet above the street, is the highest building in the United States.

If all the bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound sold in 1925 could be placed end to end, they would make a column as high as the Woolworth Building with enough left over to extend from Lynn, Massachusetts to Cleveland, Ohio.

In many little villages as in many thriving cities along the route, who are glad to tell others about Lydia

E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. In a recent letter, Mrs. Daugherty says, "I was ill for four months before I took your medicine. I found one of your books at my front door and read it. It seemed to fit my case, so I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and after I took the third bottle, I found relief. I am on my eleventh bottle and I don't have that trouble any more, and feel like a different woman. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to every one I see who has trouble like mine. I am willing to answer any letters from women asking about the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. Ed. Daugherty, 1308 Orchard Avenue, Muscatine, Iowa.

Mrs. Carr Also Helped

Muncie, Indiana.—"I could not get around to do my work. I took treatments and they did me no good. I had always heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's medicine and I thought it would be like all the others, but I found out after I took half a bottle, as I have proved it wonderful. I am taking it yet and I can do all my work. I am feeling fine now, and it is your good medicines that have done it. I tell every woman of the good I get from taking the Vegetable Compound and from using the Sanative Wash."—Mrs. P. W. Carr, 721 West Powers St., Muncie, Indiana.

War Town Is No More

When America got into the World war the great demand for iron built up a thriving town of 3,000, called Midco, near the iron mines of southern Missouri.

The iron company spent $3,000,000 just to house its employees. The mines closed down when the war ended and the miners began to move away. Finally only a score of families were left and these had to pay no rent, as hundreds of houses were empty. What remained of the town has just been sold to a wrecking company and soon nature will have reclaimed the townsite.—Capper's Weekly.

Boy Scout Reptile Expert

The first scout's merit badge to go to a Louisiana boy for displaying a thorough knowledge of reptiles, and one of the few such medals to be awarded in the United States, has been given Martin Burkenroad, sixteen, of New Orleans. His knowledge embraces snakes, alligators, lizards and turtles. One of his experiments with a king snake led him to see whether the reptile would bite. It did, and for two weeks he carried a bandaged arm.

Locomotive Speedometer

A speedometer for a locomotive has at last been devised. For a long time there have been experiments with belts, pulleys and gears on long flexible shafts, but the vibration and swaying of the engine made them inaccurate. The new method uses a magneto-generator driven from one of the engine wheels with an indicator in the cab.

The Moon and the Stars

Addison Mizner was talking at Miami about a Florida speculator who had failed.

"The man attempted the impossible," Mr. Mizner said. "He tried to make a colossal fortune out of a swamp. Result, ruin and disgrace."

"The child that cries for the moon," Mr. Mizner added, "is always made in the end to see stars."

LONG DISTANCE
TELEPHONE SERVICE CHANGES

Between all points, in Illinois and elsewhere, reached through Illinois Bell Telephone Company

Effective 12:01 A. M., October 1, 1926

Reductions in Long Distance Rates

To points 150 miles or more distant the rates have been substantially reduced. The greater the distance, the greater the reduction. Certain rates for distances between 24 and 110 miles have been adjusted to make the schedule consistent throughout, but in no case has the basic Station to Station rate been raised more than five cents.

Reversed Charges on Station to Station Calls

Heretofore the reversal of charges has been available only on person to person calls. As a further convenience to the public this privilege is now extended to Station to Station calls where the rate is 25 cents or more.

Longer Reduced Rate Period on Station to Station Calls

Reduced rate hours for Station to Station calls now now begin at 7 P. M. instead of 8:30 P. M., as formerly. Between 7 and 8:30 P. M. the discount is approximately 25 per cent of the day station to station rates; from 8:30 P. M. to 4:30 A. M. the discount is about 50 per cent of the day rates. These discounts apply where the day station to station rate is 40 cents or more, with a minimum reduced rate of 35 cents. Because of the unsatisfactory service conditions which it brought about, the midnight discount has been discontinued.

EVEN big-city folks must have their "neighborhood stores"! Most of them would no more think of going down town to fight their way through the crowds in search of a roast for dinner than they would of walking to the factory to get a pair of shoes.

City women know that their neighborhood stores can supply them just what they want — and that, in most cases, the service is more alert and friendly.

The same thing is true of this "neighborhood". Our merchants—the men whose ads you read in this paper — are in position to furnish your home with the best and most popular brands of goods. Not only can they save you money, but they gladly relieve you of a lot of worry and loss of time.
